

Helen Price Johnson grew up on Whidbey Island, graduating from Langley High School and then earning a degree from Mills College in Administration and Legal Processes. She and her husband Dave raised their four children here. She is a third generation small business owner on the island.

Helen has spent her adult life in service to our community, and was recognized for this service by being named a Home Town Hero in 2004. As a twice-elected Board Member of the South Whidbey School District, she worked hard to improve our children's educational opportunities, turning budget deficits into surpluses, discord and inefficiency into award-winning performance. In 2008 Helen made history by becoming the first woman elected to the Board of Island County Commissioners.
